General Overview
The Department of Health & Kinesiology offers coursework leading to the M.S. in Kinesiology (36 credit hours) with a flexible curriculum to meet the specific needs and interests of the student. Students may tailor their major elective coursework, supporting field coursework, and research so that their degree plan includes material relative to their own career goals.

Here’s How it Works
You can enter at any time (summer, fall, spring)
You take two courses during Summer I (June), when you are “least busy” with work
You take one course during Summer II (July), because you’ll go back to work in August and need to get ready
In the fall you take one of the four core courses (see below), spread over the long semester to give you more time.
Spring, again one of the core courses.
Repeat the pattern, taking EDKN 5305: Graduate Research Project in the second spring.
To accumulate 36 hours, you will be done in three summers and the four long semesters (two years) in between.
Options: Up to 12 hours (four courses) may be taken in other fields, such as Education Administration, Business, Counseling and Guidance, Psychology;
At your discretion, you may take other courses during the long semesters and graduate sooner (all courses have to be approved by the Graduate Coordinator).
