Thank you for taking my call. <Applicant's name> is a finalist for the position of <job title> at Texas A&M University- Kingsville & has indicated you as a reference. May I ask you some questions about <Applicant's name>?

1) In what capacity have you known the applicant? And for how long?
2) What was <Applicant's name> title, salary, and dates of employment with your organization?
3) How would you describe <Applicant's name> work?

4) How would you describe <Applicant's name> style of relating to people?

5) What are <Applicant's name> strongest job skills?

6) Have you perceived any weaknesses in work performance?

7) Is there anything else you would like to tell me about <Applicant's name> work performance or behavior?

8) Would <Applicant's name> be eligible for rehire?

Other question(s)

Reference Check Sample Questions:

1. What is your relationship to the candidate and how long have you known the candidate? This question allows a hiring manager to confirm whether a job seeker and a reference ever worked together and perhaps to assess their relationship.

For instance, the reference could be a previous boss or a co-worker. In knowing the specific nature of the relationship, a hiring manager can better gauge the information provided.

2. Can you confirm the candidate's job title, dates of employment and work duties? Learn about a candidate's previous job experience and responsibilities.

Always verify the candidate's job title and dates of employment to be sure the information provided is accurate.

3. Can you describe the candidate's work performance? It's easy for candidates to make bold claims on their resumes. But there's no better way to determine the validity of such statements than by asking a reference.

4. This position for which _____ is being considered involves the following job responsibilities (e.g., teaching full loads (4 courses), conducting a research program with undergraduates, recruiting new freshmen and Junior College transfer students, writing competitive grant proposals, and mentoring faculty and students in _____, etc.). Based on your knowledge of _____ training and experience, what is your opinion regarding their ability to successfully perform those duties?

This information might help project how well a candidate might perform in the same or related job.

5. Was the candidate accountable in performing tasks? When asking references this question about a job seeker's work ethic, hiring managers should find out how the person reacted to a mistake and whether he or she could be held responsible for meeting deadlines and completing projects.

6. How would you describe their communications ability – sharing information, giving presentations, preparing proposals, etc.? Insight into the candidate's ability to successfully communicate in the work environment.

7. What are the candidate's strengths and weaknesses? Hiring managers want to learn about a candidate's strengths and weaknesses when talking to a reference.

This question can help hiring managers determine how easily the individual can be trained and whether he or she is a good fit for the position.

8. What was it like to work with the candidate? This line of inquiry helps hiring managers determine whether a candidate is a good cultural fit for the organization. It can reveal the candidate's personality, communication skills, how well he or she takes direction and if the person is a team player.

9. Why did the candidate leave a position? Not only might the answer to this question be illuminating but it can also help managers gain insight into how long a candidate might stay with a new organization.

10. Company policies aside, would you rehire this candidate? Whether a reference would rehire a candidate can sum up an entire conversation prior to that point, which is why it's often asked near the end. If there's only time to ask a single question, this should be the one. Don't forget to drill down to find out an explanation why.

11. Is there anything else we should know about this candidate? By asking this, hiring managers can find out specific details about a candidate not addressed in previous questions.
