

Scholastic Probation

A graduate student pursuing a specific program is placed on scholastic probation if, at the end of either long semester or the second summer session, the cumulative grade point average of student's graduate program falls below 3.0. If the probational status is not removed during the next full semester for which the student enrolls (combined summer terms count as one full semester), the student's academic standing will change to suspension. As soon as the academic standing is changed to suspension, any pre-registration courses for future semesters will be dropped. The graduate student must be reinstated before registering for further graduate work.

Undergraduate students will be placed on scholastic probation any time their cumulative institution grade point average at Texas A&M University-Kingsville falls below 2.0. Such undergraduate students are required to participate to the fullest in academic support programs and to seek academic advising. Undergraduate students who have been placed on scholastic probation will be removed from such probation at the conclusion of the semester or summer term at this university when they have achieved a 2.0 cumulative institution grade point average.